March 2014

On behalf of Johns Hopkins University, I am delighted to join my wife, human rights attorney and Bloomberg School of Public Health faculty member Joanne Rosen, in welcoming you to the fourth B'More Proud LGBTQIA Leadership Summit. This year's event is being hosted by Johns Hopkins, but the summit represents the collective effort and desire of twelve colleges and universities around Baltimore to create an environment that is not only inclusive, not only welcoming, not simply tolerant, but actively supportive of our LGBTQIA students’ development, as individuals and as leaders.

Surely, we need leaders. Without individuals willing to step up and lead, we would not have seen the unprecedented march toward equality for LGBTQ people. Since last June, we have seen the de facto demise of the Defense of Marriage Act and celebrated as state after state, through popular vote and legislative action, has adopted marriage equality. We have seen a sea change in culture in less than twenty years, from the controversy surrounding Ellen DeGeneres’ landmark “coming out” episode to the extraordinary popularity of Glee’s gay teen icon, Kurt. And we have seen individuals, like Zach Wahls, change the perception of what it means to be a family, simply by standing up and identifying himself as a proud Iowan, an Eagle Scout and the son of two moms.

I am delighted that this positive momentum is being echoed at Johns Hopkins. This year, we launched Johns Hopkins LGBTQ Life office and welcomed our inaugural director, Demere Woolway. At our Bloomberg School of Public Health, we are developing new curricula to ensure we train future researchers and scientists on how to engage with and meet the needs of LGBTQ people. And importantly, we are looking, as this conference does, at the intersections of identities of our students, faculty and staff so that we can support them in realizing their full measure of excellence.

Of course, there is more work to do. More to do to here on our campuses to create the institutional support our students need and deserve. More to do across our nation and around the globe so that all citizens are able to live open, safe, and productive lives. More to do in celebrating what it means to live such lives.

This conference is one way to begin to do more. As you listen to today’s keynotes or participate in breakout sessions on everything from media advocacy to women, leadership and queer identity, I hope you will challenge yourselves to confront difficult topics and look for points of consensus. I hope you will seize opportunities to connect with students from your home institutions and fellow universities and plant the seeds of the next conversation or collaboration that will contribute to building a more just and compassionate world.

I wish you a productive summit today that you will draw on for years to come.

Sincerely,

Ronald J. Daniels
President
ABOUT B’MORE PROUD

BACKGROUND

Conceptualized in the Summer of 2009, B’More Proud is a Baltimore-Metro LGBTQIA college leadership summit that raises awareness and fosters visibility of LGBTQIA concerns, encourages LGBTQIA student involvement and leadership development, and provides an opportunity for intercollegiate networking and socializing among LGBTQIA college students in the region. It is a network open to the twelve colleges in the Baltimore-Metro area.

MISSION STATEMENT

The B’More Proud LGBTQIA Leadership Summit exists to create a generative opportunity for leadership development of LGBTQIA students that:
• Raises awareness and provides education that fosters visibility of marginalized groups
• Encourages student involvement on their respective campuses, inter-campus, and in the larger Baltimore community
• Cultivates leadership skills and knowledge of effective student organizing philosophies and techniques
• Provides an opportunity for socializing and networking amongst LGBTQIA student leaders, organizations and institutions in the Baltimore area.

VISION

The B’More Proud LGBTQIA Leadership Summit will create a competent and empowered population of LGBTQIA student leaders, engaged in a formal city-wide LGBTQIA student leadership alliance that creates a welcoming and supportive environment for LGBTQIA college students and promotes service within the larger Baltimore community, someday expanding to include colleges and universities in the Mid-Atlantic region.

GOALS OF THE ORGANIZATION

• Collaborate in planning and sponsorship of all programs and events intercollegiately
• Develop an intercollegiate student leadership conference that travels to a different university in this area each year
• Develop an annual or biannual intercollegiate academic symposium/colloquium that promote LGBTQIA scholarship in this area
• Create a virtual resource for LGBTQIA students, faculty, and staff that encourages student involvement, collaboration, and a sense of community
• Develop a professional and social network for LGBTQIA students, faculty, and staff at institutions of higher education in the Baltimore-Metro area
• Advocate for dedicated staff, space, and funding of LGBTQIA initiatives in student affairs and academic affairs so that all area institutions can adequately serve the LGBTQIA populations and educate their universities on LGBTQIA topics

THIS YEAR’S THEME

BREAKING BOUNDARIES

THE INTERSECTIONS OF OUR IDENTITIES

This year’s B’More Proud LGBTQIA Leadership Summit seeks to achieve the leadership, networking, and educational goals of the B’More Proud Collegiate Queer Coalition of Metropolitan Baltimore with a special focus on the intersections of identities. This conference is meant to help participants tear down the boundaries that seem to separate the various parts of the LGBTQIA community. In this way, we hope to establish our identities holistically and independent of the confines and preconceptions society places around certain aspects of our lives.

The son of two lesbian mothers, the 19-year-old University of Iowa engineering student had no idea that his heartfelt testimony that day would spread like viral wildfire, and even land him on The Ellen DeGeneres Show. A state champion in high school debate and multiple national finalist in competitive acting, Zach was no stranger to speaking before an audience. Yet, he had never talked about his family in a public setting or in such open and candid terms. On his way home from the public hearing, he thought that his work was, for all practical purposes, finished. Just two days after he testified during that hearing, however, a YouTube video of his testimony went viral, garnering nearly two million views with millions more via Facebook, Twitter, national and international television, and other online media. Although initially hesitant to share his story on such a vast stage, Zach remembered the famed words of his favorite superhero’s uncle, Ben Parker: “With great power comes great responsibility.” Never before in his life had he had such an opportunity to stand up and speak out on behalf of his family. So he did what any of us would do, deciding to advocate for family and families like his all over the country. After appearing on numerous television programs in person and his testimony airing on MSNBC, ABC, CBS and CNN, Zach found himself working on a book and has now penned a game-changing college and university lecture called, “What makes a family?” Zach shares a story that has never before been told, and offers a fresh, bold perspective on a recently rekindled—and always contentious—issue: gay marriage. Like any family’s story, his is one of highs and lows, laughs and tribulations. You’ll laugh, you may even cringe, and no matter your thoughts on marriage equality in our country, you’ll walk away with a new perspective and something to think about.

EVENING KEYNOTE

Zach Wahls
“What Makes a Family?”

Zach Wahls tried to answer that very question when he testified before the Iowa House Judiciary Committee in January, 2011.

The son of two lesbian mothers, the 19-year-old University of Iowa engineering student had no idea that his heartfelt testimony that day would spread like viral wildfire, and even land him on The Ellen DeGeneres Show.

A state champion in high school debate and multiple national finalist in competitive acting, Zach was no stranger to speaking before an audience. +1 “IF I KNEW THEN...”
ALYSSA FENIX, ARUNDEL HIGH SCHOOL GSA ADVISOR
In this interactive workshop, conference attendees will get a chance to reflect on their own recent experiences, learning opportunities and explore the readings and findings of the presenter’s project to gain tools and inspiration to continue their growth as self-identified leaders in the LGBT community. Furthermore, they will be able to connect to the writers of letters to recognize similarities in their own journeys. They will also be asked to write letters to themselves in five years, imagining using their power to create change within themselves and their community. The hope is to empower them to commit to their own personal growth through their own identity.

+2 “QUEERING REPRODUCTIVE JUSTICE”
LAUREN PALK, NATIONAL CENTER FOR LESBIAN RIGHTS
The LGBTQIA movement and the reproductive justice (RJ) movement often work parallel to each other, instead of together. This workshop will discuss all the ways in which our goals are intertwined and inextricable from one another. We will explore what reproductive justice looks like in the LGBTQIA context, and brainstorm together about how the movements can, do, and should work together for common goals.

+3 “ADVOCATING THROUGH THE MEDIA”
STEVE CHARING, BALTIMORE OUTLOUD
The session will be devoted to explaining how print and social media can be effectively used to advocate for LGBT issues (or general issues). An explanation will be offered to show the relationship among politics, public opinion and the media and how they affect each other. Helpful tips will be offered on writing letters to the editor of publications, writing blogs, and the proper use of social media to successfully get the message across.

+4 “TRANS* 101”
BEN PANICO, JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY CLASS OF 2014
This breakout session discusses common terminology and transition information, as well as best practices for being an ally to trans individuals. This workshop is meant for individuals who would like to learn more about transgender identities and experiences, though all are welcome to come and share their story!

+5 “SAFE DATING: IDENTIFYING ABUSERS AND SEXUAL PREDATORS”
ANGELES EVANS, TURNAROUND, INC.
One of the most effective ways to end domestic and sexual violence is to teach people how to identify abusers and sexual predators. This presentation is for both men and women, and it teaches participants about the warning signs in abusive relationships and tips to help avoid sexual assault. After this presentation, participants will be able to identify warning signs of abusive behavior and get connected with services for victims of domestic and sexual violence.

+6 “HEALTH CONCERNS FOR LGBT PEOPLE OF COLOR”
MICHAEL FRANKLIN, STAR TRACK
People of Color are at higher risk for a spectrum of chronic illnesses and have a significantly shorter average lifespan. LGBTQ people face similar risks. What is the impact of the intersection of racism and homophobia/transphobia on our individual health and the health of our communities? This session will explore disproportionate risks, barriers to care, and advocacy strategies.

SECOND BREAKOUT SESSION 1:10-2:00PM

+7 “B’MORE YOU! INTERSECTING IDENTITIES”
JESS MYERS + LISA GREY, UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND BALTIMORE COUNTY
The purpose of this breakout session, with the use of identity beads is to: 1) engage participants in conversations about social identities, 2) engage participants in thinking about how their sexual orientation intersects and impacts their other social identities and experiences, 3) engage participants in conversations around how their other social identities impact the way in which their sexual orientation is actualized and makes their queer experience unique, and 4) start building connections between participants.

+8 “ANYONE CAN HOLLABACK!”
SHAWNA PORTER + MELANIE KELLER, HOLLABACK! BALTIMORE
Let’s talk about organizing, consciousness-raising, protesting, and the challenges that come up when you’re trying to change the world. Using Hollaback! Baltimore as a completely volunteer- and locally-run example, co-site leaders Shawna and Melanie will emphasize collaboration, diversity, and surviving on little to no funding.

+9 “WHO SAYS?”
VANN MICHAEL MILLHOUSE, BLACK TRANSMEN, INC.
Marginalized groups too often do not have the opportunity to see themselves represented in public view. Lack of visibility causes a hindrance to understanding self, hence presenting a challenge to relating to others in a community. Specifically, LGBTQI youth are highly impacted by lack of awareness and support in the areas of gender identity, expression and orientation increasing fragmentation under the LGBTQI umbrella. “Who Says?” is a highly interactive session designed to engage participants in analyzing personal and societal views about sexual and gender minorities and their impact to begin the action of eliminating discontinuity within the community. The session will guide participants in peer-to-peer exercises to examine the means in which their personal perspectives about LGBTQI persons developed, how their viewpoint
+10 "COMING OUT IN THE DIGITAL AGE"
BROOKS GABEL, JUSTLIKEYOU.ORG
This breakout session will talk about how people are coming out today. Online communities have become integrated into many individuals’ coming out processes in this day in age. From online chat rooms, to dating sites, to mobile applications, people all over the world are connecting with others who identify similarly to them. This discussion will challenge what “resources” we currently have online and how they may help and hinder identity, self expression, and the coming out process itself.

+11 “REALITIES OF YOUNG BLACK GAY MEN IN BALTIMORE”
KURT RAGIN, STAR TRACK
In Baltimore City, one in three African American Men who have Sex with Men (MSM) between the ages of 13-24 years old is living with HIV. We will explore the factors that put the lives of young Black gay men in jeopardy as well as the resourcefulness and resilience that helps them survive and thrive. We will also present some innovative and effective outreach strategies to reach the population where they are.

+12 “BOIS OF BALTIMORE X ALTERNATIVE MASCULINITY”
BOIS OF BALTIMORE
This workshop will focus on what it means to be alternatively masculine as related to the Black queer female and trans* male experience. This workshop will address masculine presentation within the larger social context, active engagement and the larger community (familial, spiritual, communal), and creating and participating in healthy relationships (platonic, romantic, and sexual). There are many facets of alternative masculinity, however, these are the most salient to the success of our individual selves and our community. The goal of this presentation is to engage bois and other queer-identified people on the topic of being alternatively masculine, so as to maximize our lived experiences and (re)connect with our most authentic selves.

THIRD BREAKOUT SESSION 4:00-4:50PM

+13 “BETWEEN WOMEN: LEADERSHIP AND OUR QUEER IDENTITY”
JESS MYERS, DIRECTOR OF THE WOMEN’S CENTER AT UMBC
This special Between Women’s discussion group at B’More Proud will give women-identified conference attendees the chance to connect with each other especially as women, while also leaving space for the various other intersections of their identities. The workshop will use group dialogue and consciousness-raising to connect each other with their experiences related to being queer and student leaders on campus and beyond.

+14 “QUEER FILM: YESTERDAY AND TODAY”
CHIRS LINES, B’MORE QEST
This breakout session will cover a brief history of queer film with clips from Celluloid Closet and other classic queer films. Mr. Lines will also look at queer film today and queer representations in the age of marriage equality.

+15 “HOW WE GET GENDER IDENTITY WRONG”
JENNIFER FISCHETTI, TRANS MARYLAND
Many people think gender identity is a characteristic of being transgender or gender non-conforming. Additionally, some think it signifies solely a person’s core sense of self. Yet it is actually something quite different. Learn how gender orientation, identity and expression relate to each other and understand the need for legal protections/advocacy which protect EVERYONE, including trans*, gender non-conforming AND cis-gender individuals too.

+16 “TRUE OR FALSE: RUMORS & MYTHS AROUND SEXUAL HEALTH”
RASHAAD BANKS, PLANNED PARENTHOOD OF MARYLAND
This is an interactive session where common rumors around sex, gender, sexually transmitted diseases, etc. are examined. Participants explore common myths and rumors, and discuss whether they hold any validity. For example, myths like “blue balls” and “the blue waffle” and questions such as “can two condoms give extra protection?” will be addressed.

+17 “CHANGING CAMPUS: CREATING INCLUSIVE POLICIES AND PRACTICES”
DEMERE WOOLWAY, DIRECTOR OF LGBTQ LIFE AT JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY
In this interactive presentation, participants will discuss obstacles that prevent LGBT people from complete inclusion on college campuses. We will then discuss structural changes that can alleviate these obstacles, based on promising practices from across the country. We will close with a discussion on how college students can effect change on campus.

+18 “MARRIAGE EQUALITY: EXCLUSIONARY OR INTERSECTIONAL?”
BRIAN SILVA + MAYA RUPERT, MARRIAGE EQUALITY USA & NATIONAL CENTER FOR LESBIAN RIGHTS
There is a narrative that the fight for marriage equality is, at its core, an elevation of the needs of the most privileged in the community at the expense of the most marginalized. While the origin of this frame is understandable and even commendable, research and experience have shown this narrative to be untrue. This workshop will aim at creating an understanding of marriage equality advocacy that centralizes the needs of those in the LGBT community that have been the most marginalized, and intersects with other important progressive issues. We will explore questions such as how we can build a marriage equality movement that supports other progressive issues, and elevates the voices of transgender people, same-sex couples of color, and low-income families.

+19 “ALLYSHIP 101: UNDERSTANDING PRIVILEGE AND POWER”
CASSIE MADISON, GOUCHER COLLEGE CLASS OF 2016
This breakout session is targeted towards straight and/or cisgender allies. The goal of the session will be to understand the privileges of being straight and/or cisgender and how it affects the LGBT community. We will address common issues about allies in the LGBT community, such as allies derailling discussions and imposing ally presence in safe spaces. We will discuss appropriate language usage, behaviors, and actions for allies, as well as discuss tactics for speaking up against bigotry and discrimination without silencing queer people’s voices.
PLANNING COMMITTEE

RODOLFO FINOCCHI
CONFERENCE CHAIR

Rodolfo is a member of the Class of 2015 at Johns Hopkins University, majoring in Biomedical Engineering and minoring in Entrepreneurship and Management. After Hopkins, he hopes to attend graduate school and go into the medical device industry. In his free time, Rodolfo enjoys swimming, reading, looking for the few movies he hasn’t yet watched, and exploring the streets of Baltimore with his friends. He joined the B’More Proud 2014 Planning Committee because of his past experiences attending LGBTQIA conferences and the benefits he gained from them. He is excited about this year’s summit and is dedicated to making sure it unites students across the Baltimore area, stirs up some interesting conversation, and causes participants to feel empowered and enlightened enough to make a difference.

ANASTASIA PIERRON
CONFERENCE CHAIR

Anastasia is a member of the Class of 2014 at Johns Hopkins University, majoring in Public Health and minoring in Film & Media Studies. After graduation, she hopes to attend nursing school to become a nurse practitioner with a focus on international public health. When she isn’t studying, she is obsessing over movies and television shows to an unhealthy degree (Netflix is not her friend). She also enjoys training for runs, and will be running her first half marathon this April in Washington D.C! Since sophomore year, Anastasia has been actively involved in the LGBT community at Hopkins, and is so excited to be able to help bring back the B’More Proud LGBTQIA Leadership Summit to the JHU campus. She hopes that the conference will provide the opportunity for students all across Baltimore to come together to share ideas and learn from one another!

REBECCA RIVERA
PROGRAMMING CO-CHAIR

Rebecca is a member of the Class of 2017 at Johns Hopkins University, and is currently pursuing a degree in Chemical and Biomolecular Engineering. He hopes to help make the conference the best it has ever been.
MIA CAPOBIANCO
DESIGN AND MARKETING CO-CHAIR

Mia is a member of Johns Hopkins University's Class of 2017, studying Materials Science and Engineering. For fun, she seeks out new music, browses Reddit, and hangs out with her sorority. Mia decided to join the B'More Proud 2014 Planning Committee because she loves events that bring together people with a common interest from different communities. She hopes this conference will be a fun social event, but also one that will provoke self-reflection and thoughtful conversation.

AMANDA SPOHRER
LOGISTICS CO-CHAIR

Amanda is a member of the Class of 2017 at Johns Hopkins University and is majoring in Chemical and Biomolecular Engineering. When she's not in the library, Amanda loves watching movies and spending time with her friends. When she heard about B'More Proud, and the opportunity to be on the 2014 Planning Committee, she couldn't wait to sign up. The LGBTQIA community on campus has been like a family to her this semester, and she wanted to help open that community up to the rest of the schools in the area. She hopes that people leave this conference with new knowledge, and new friends.

AUSTIN SULLINS
LOGISTICS CO-CHAIR

Austin is a member of the Class of 2016 at Johns Hopkins University, majoring in Neuroscience. After graduating he hopes to attend medical school somewhere closer to his home in Arizona. Lucy is a member of the Class of 2017 at Johns Hopkins University and is majoring in International Studies. Like a true citizen of the world, Lucy never stops exploring all that is around her, including the local food! She has always been drawn to social justice and loves to engage in open discussions with all people. The collaborative nature of working on a conference has allowed this to flourish and she can’t wait for the greater engagement of the students in the Baltimore area. Above all, she wishes for everyone to come together to enjoy the conference and be exposed to new perspectives and people.

MARIELA PINEDO
ADVISOR

Mariela graduated from Johns Hopkins University in 2012 with a degree in Romance Languages. She currently works at the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine with hopes of attending medical school in the near future. While she’s not stressing about graduate school applications and studying for the MCAT, she loves watching foreign films and exploring what Baltimore has to offer. She’s also a self-proclaimed foodie and enjoys trying out different restaurants all over the area. She was on the first B'More Proud board in 2010 and has seen the positive impact of having a conference of this sort, reaching out to students in the area. She is dedicated to helping the new generation of student leaders in putting on the best B'More Proud LGBTQIA Leadership Summit yet.
